Louis Napoleon. Opinions vary widely in regard to the character and capacity of the late Emperor of France, but it may be questioned if on the whole he was not the best ruler that country ever had. He made mistakes, but considering the length of time he held sway-longer than any other Sovereign since Louis the XVI-it must be conceded that he ruled with much more than ordinary sagacity to enable him to hold control for that period over a people so variable and tempestuous as the French. As a warrior he was in no sense the legitimate nephew of his uncle, though he won some military renown by the Russian and Italian campaigns, but as ruler he was vastly superior to the great Corsican. Assuming that the French people are unfitted, as yet, for any other than personal rule it is doubtful if France will fare as well or be governed as wisely under the sway of any of the present aspirants as while Napoleon III held the reins. France is now nominally a r public, but only in name; and the elements of discord are rising in a way to make the task of leadership more difficult, day by day, for the aged statesman who is now called president. Thiers is now in the seventy-fifth year of his age-ten years older than Louis Napoleon, who died yesterday. His provisional government must soon give way, and then will probably come the sway, for a season, of the Legitimists or the Orleanists. through the Count de Chambord, or one of the Orleans princes. But eventually the young Napoleon, snould be live and show capacity, will be heard from in France. Neither the Legitimists or Orleans family have any strong hold upon the French people; but the name of Napoleon will alway be a thing of strength for the aspirants bearing it, and especially when the temporary feeling to the disadvantage of Louis

Napoleon through the late disasters to France

shall have died out.

In the case of Susan B. Anthony and fourtees other wemen arrested at Rochester, New York, on the charge of voting illegally, Mr. Van Voorhes, one of the counsel for Miss A., brought out some historical facts worthy of note. Replying to the statement of prosecuting counsel that, at the time of the adoption of the constitution women were not allowed to vote in any state in the union. Mr. Van V. denied the truthfulness of the assertion. He cited the case of New Jersey, where for years the women voted and their right to do so was recognized by the state statutes. In the year 1800, he said, the women generally voted at the Presidential election. The constitution of Georgia adopted in 1789 permitted women to vote, and he understood they availed themselves of the privilege "In this case," said he, "women have broken down all the barriers spoken of by Judge Cartter, and have actually voted. In the action brought by women in the District of Columbia against inspectors who refused their votes Judge Cartter holds that the constitution gives the right to vote to women, but that Congress must first enact laws to enable them to exercise the right of suffrage. This inability has been overcome by He then went on to argue that in construing a constitution we are not to ask what the framers people who adopt the entire instrument intend and understand by it. "This defendant," said he, "believes she had a right to vote and exer-cised that right; she had no intent to break the law and is no criminal; and you must find that they committed an immoral act and intended to riolate the law, or you cannot hold them." The judge didn't seem to take this ingenious of the case, however, and required bail for the trial of the prisoners. Miss Anthony refused to give bail, she now says, because she desired the matter to be placed in such a legal attitude that it could be brought before the United States Supreme Court for a decision. As stated else where in our columns to-day, Susan will be here next week to look after Congress and "run" the frage Association, of which she is president She has announced her intention of having no side shows this year at the convention, so there will be no room for "the little red-headed man carrying a banner inscribed, 'Peace on earth' good will to men," and bearing ethnographic representations, who occupied a prominent place on the platform last year. As to dissertations on iress reform, the social evil, "lectures to mothers," &c., she'll have none of it. Susan ion't want any nonsense this year; not she. She wants everybody who takes part in the convention to go in hammer and tongs for woman suffrage and nothing else. She believes, naturally enough, that suffrage once secured, the settle-

An interesting suit, involving the rights of holders of life insurance policies, has been brought in Baltimore. In July, 1869, a gentle-man insured his life on the endowment plan in a company for $10,000, agreeing to pay a preten years to receive $10,000; and it was further agreed on the part of the company that the inshould participate in the profits of the company. In 1870 the company declined further ontracts, and made an arrangement with another company to accept the former's insurances and issue similar policies (changing only the name of the company) to its policy holders. Upon this understanding the gentleman who held a policy in the first company surrendered it, and in the spring of 1872 the new company issued a policy to him of like tenor, but bearing a different date. One of the stipulations of both policies was that after the payment of two annual premiums the party insured should be at liberty to require the ssue to him of a paid-up policy for two-tenths of $10,000, with a right to share proportionately in the surplus and profits. The insured party elected to surrender his policy and require a paid-up policy. The paid-up policy was issued, but provided that he should not participate in the profits and surplus. The policy was refused, and the insured party now brings suit to compel the company to issue another paid-up policy giving him the right to participate in the profits ment of side issues will speedily be accomplished.

The utility of the telegraph, as well as the superior enterprise of the American press over that of Europe, was forcibly illustrated in the circumstances attending the death of Louis Napoleon yesterday. The cable dispatches this morning inform us that, with one exception, the evening papers of Paris "had no time to print" nore than the mere announcement of the death. thout comment; yet THE STAR of the same day, printed more than three thousand miles om the death-bed of ex-royalty, had not only all the particulars of the occurrence, but found me and space to print also something more than a column of interesting matter in relation to the illustrious deceased. Undoubtedly the interest which such an event must have had for the people of France, only some twenty miles distant, should more than offset this advantage and have prompted the journals of that country to show at least as much enterprise in regard to it as was exhibited by those of a foreign land.
Yet they aid not; and the circumstance furnishes another demonstration of the fact that the newspapers of America are the most enterprising in

The board of health last winter looked after the butchers and others who cut ice from off impure water. We have heard of joe cut last week from Rock creek, just below the large sewer which empticalts filthy contents into that stream near the Aqueduct bridge. Now, even if this ice is only used by butchers to preserve their meat, it seems that such meat must about some of the foul gases which escape from the thawing ice; and if so, is it fit for food? That's what the public would like to know.

It is satisfactory to know that the interest or the various bonds payable from the District. treasury was promptly paid on the 1st instant: the amount aggregating more than two hundred thousand dollars.

What Becomes of the Wicked? This is an interesting question for a great many people, who would be glad to have it settled one way or the other not that they have any personal concern in the matter, oh, no, but then it would be satisfactory to ascertain exactly what is to become of the majority of their friends, you know. The knotty problem is engaging the attention of the Methodist preachers' association in New York city, where wicked people abound, (in the city, not the association,) and the discussion at their regular weekly meeting on Monday last was unusually excited. No satisfactory conclusion was arrived at, and the following ques-tions were proposed for discussion at the next regular meeting: "Shall the wicked be finally destroyed ?" "Will the wicked in hell finally become extinct?" "Are the future punishments of the wicked permanent ?" "Are the conscious punishments of the wicked endiese, or are the punishments of the wicked in hell parallel to the eternal bliss of the righteous in heaven?" Efforts were made to postpone these questions indefi-nitely, or for a long period, and, also, to exclude reporters when the discussion takes place. Both motions were lost, and it was determined to have the discussion next Monday. Several prominent elergymen are preparing to speak on the subject, and New York awaits their decision

The constitutionality of the enforcement law has again been aftirmed by Justices Strong and Crawford sitting in the state of Delaware. The case was the United States against an election officer who erased the names of colored men from the assessment list, thus disqualifying them as voters. The defendant made a motion in arrest of judgment on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the enforcement act, but the motion was overruled by the court-

The late Ex-Emperor Napoleon said about ten days ago, referring to some new turn of affairs in France, "I shall now be called by the French poople sooner than I expected." Alas for the the uncertainty of human calculations! He received an imperative call from another quarter and was compelled to relinquish his bright dreams of earthly preferment.

The message of Governor Dix, of New York, is a good deal praised on all sides.

tagious diseases when we have near ut hand a preventive whose eminent qualities have been confirmed by more than twenty years of success in Europe and in this country? At a time when the Small Pox and other diseases threaten to spread so rapidly in consequence of the axtreme severity of the weather, it is of the greatest importance to build up our constitutions, in order to resist and fight against all the kinds of pernicious influences which surround us; therefore, it would be impossible to call too strongly the attention of the public on this very important point, that is the use of Bitters prepared with the greatest care, according to the principles of the medical art, and which, in consequence of their action on the blood, stomach, liver and principal organs of the body, produces such incontestable results. Moreover, it is so agreeable to the taste that there is no tonic which can be compared to them. If you want to be convinced go to your druggist, and ask for Dr. L. G.
